

4 DEMONSTRATIVES

Demonstratives are words that point to people, animals, or things. They help us show which one we are talking about.

1. This – Points to one thing that is close to us.

Example: "This pencil is mine." (The pencil is near me.)

2. That – Points to one thing that is far away.

Example: "That bag is hers." (The bag is not near me.)

3. These – Points to many things that are close to us.

Example: "These toys are fun!" (The toys are near me.)

4. Those – Points to many things that are far away.

Example: "Those birds are flying." (The birds are far from me.)

There are two main types of demonstratives:

👉 Demonstrative Pronouns

👉 Demonstrative Adjectives

• Demonstrative Pronouns

These are used on their own to refer to something specific and replace the noun in a sentence. They show which person or thing is being talked about.

Examples:

- This is my favorite book. (Refers to something near)
- That looks amazing! (Refers to something far)
- These are delicious cookies. (Refers to things near)
- Those are the shoes I like. (Refers to things far)

• Demonstrative Adjectives

These words are used before a noun to show which one is being referred to. They describe a noun by pointing it out.

Examples:

- This chair is comfortable. (Describes the chair that is near)
- That book is old. (Describes the book that is far)
- These pens are new. (Describes the pens that are near)
- Those apples are fresh. (Describes the apples that are far)

- Summary:

Demonstrative pronouns (this, that, these, those) can stand alone and refer to something specific. Demonstrative adjectives (this, that, these, those) come before a noun to describe which one.

REMEMBER

- Use this/these for things near you.
- Use that/those for things far from you.
