

16 MAY AND MIGHT FOR POSSIBILITY

That balloon might land here. May I use the binoculars now?

May and Might are modal verbs. We use may to show 50% chances and might to show 30% chances for something to happen.

Subject	may (not) / might (not)	Base form
She	may	want help.
It	might	land here.

We use may / might and may not (mayn't) / might not (mightn't) to talk about future possibilities.

👉 They may win the match.

👉 It might rain tonight.

We can also use may and might for states.

Form

👉 Subject + may / might + be / have + extra words.

For example:

👉 She may be sick.

👉 You might be lucky.

👉 She may have money.

👉 Sami might have cellphone.

Negatives

For example:

👉 She may not be sick.

👉 You might not be lucky.

👉 She may not have money.

👉 Sami might not have cellphone.

16.1

Read the sentences and choose the correct options below.

 You think it's quite possible that it will rain tomorrow.

☐ It may rain tomorrow.

☐ It might rain tomorrow.

 There's a small chance of your favourite teacher coming to class today.

☐ The teacher may come today.

☐ The teacher might come today.

 Your friend might bring snacks to school, but it's not very likely.

☐ My friend may bring snacks.

☐ My friend might bring snacks.

 There's a 50% chance of a school trip next month.

☐ We may go on a school trip.

☐ We might go on a school trip.

 There's a small chance that the ice cream shop will have your favourite flavour today.

☐ The shop may have my favourite flavour.

☐ The shop might have my favourite flavour.

May for Permissions

We can use may in questions to ask for permission.

 May I go to play?

 Of course. Go ahead.

 May I listen to a song?

 Yes, you may.

16.2 Rewrite each sentence as a question to ask for permission using "may".

 I go to the playground.

May I go to the playground?

 I have an extra cookie.

_____?

 I borrow your pencil.

_____?

 I play with my friend after school.

_____?

 I use your cellphones.

_____?

 I sit next to Ali during the class.

_____?

16.3

Imagine you are in these situations. Write a sentence using "may" to ask for permission.

 You want to go to the library during break.

_____?

 You want to sit next to your friend in class.

_____?

 You want to go to the bathroom.

_____?

 You want to play a game on the computer.

_____?

 You want to bring your toy to school.

_____?