

CHAPTER 02

MAKING OF PAKISTAN

REVIVALIST MOVEMENT IN THE SUB-CONTINENTINTRODUCTION:

Pakistan's history is marked by various socio-religious movements that played a crucial role in shaping its trajectory. Among these, the movements led by influential figures like Shah Waliullah, Syed Ahmed Shaheed Bareilvi, Faraizi Movement, and the Aligarh Movement stand out as significant chapters in the nation's development.

1. MOVEMENT OF SHAH WALLIULLAH:

Shah Waliullah examined the factors of the downfall of the Muslims in the Sub-continent. He convinced the Muslims to strictly follow the footsteps of the Holy Prophet S.A.W. He emphasized the Muslim regarding the importance of JIHAD and invited the emperor of Afghanistan Afghan Ahmed Shah Abdali to attack India and the Muslims from Maratha's domination. Shah Waliullah translated the Holy Quran into Persian language and wrote books on Hadith, Jurisprudence (Fiqha), and Tafseer (exegesis) his most famous book is Hujjatul Baligha. He also tried to remove social evils through various reformist movements which started from his Madrasa Rahimiya in Delhi.

2. MOVEMENT OF SYED AHMED SHAHEED BARELVI:

Syed Ahmed Shaheed Bareilvi was a charismatic leader who spearheaded a movement to counter what he perceived as un-Islamic practices. His emphasis on a puritanical interpretation of Islam aimed to unite Muslims against perceived threats to their religious identity. The movement played a role in shaping the socio-religious landscape of the time. Syed Ahmed Shaheed believed if Punjab and KPK were liberated from the Sikh domination, the Muslim would regain their old position. Jihad movement was initially very successful but soon conspiracies began against Syed Ahmed. Muslims fought with great courage but Syed Ahmed Shaheed and his companions were martyred on 6th May 1831. Syed Ahmed Shaheed and Shah Ismail Shaheed were buried near Balakot.

3. FARAIZI MOVEMENT:

Haji Shariatullah was the founder of Fariazi movement. Following are the main objectives:

- To eliminate the Un-Islamic customs and tradition this prevailed among Bengali Muslims.
- He emphasized on the need to act on Islamic injunctions or obligation (Faraiz) so his movement was called Fariazi movement.
- He organized the Muslim tenants against the Hindu landlords. As a result of his efforts the Muslims in Bengal got rid of the persecution of Hindu landlords.
- After this the religious and moral status of Bengali Muslims was improved

4. ALIGARH MOVEMENT:

The Aligarh Movement, led by Sir Syed Ahmed Khan (1817-1898), was a significant reform movement that focused on modern education and social progress for the Muslim community. Sir Syed recognized the importance of Western education and the need for Muslims to adapt to the changing times.

a) General Awareness

The Aligarh Movement sought to dispel misconceptions about British rule and encourage Muslims to embrace modern education and scientific thought. Sir Syed believed that education was the key to empowering the Muslim community and enabling them to participate fully in society.

b) Establishing Goodwill with British

Sir Syed advocated for a policy of cooperation with the British government, believing that confrontation would only hinder the community's progress. He encouraged Muslims to learn English, participate in civil service exams, and engage in constructive dialogue with the British authorities.

c) Motivation for Modern Knowledge

The Aligarh Movement emphasized the importance of acquiring modern knowledge, including science, mathematics, and technology, to prepare Muslims for the challenges of the modern world. Sir Syed established the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College in Aligarh, which became a center for modern education for Muslims.

d) Non-confrontal Politics

Sir Syed believed that political activism would divide the Muslim community and distract from the more pressing task of education and social reform. He advocated for a non-confrontational approach to politics, focusing on improving the community's economic and social conditions.

FEATURES OF ALIGARH MOVEMENT

I. EDUCATIONAL SERVICES

The Aligarh Movement significantly contributed to the educational upliftment of Muslims. The establishment of the Muhammadan Anglo-Oriental College (later Aligarh Muslim University) provided a platform for modern education, producing a generation of educated Muslims.

II. SOCIAL SERVICES

Apart from education, the movement also emphasized social reforms. It encouraged the adoption of modern scientific methods, social equality, and a rational approach to societal issues, thereby contributing to the overall betterment of the Muslim community.

DEVELOPMENT OF TWO NATION THEORY

The Two Nation Theory was a significant ideological foundation that played a crucial role in the creation of Pakistan. It emerged in the context of British India and the demand for a separate homeland for Muslims. Here's a brief explanation with the proper background and views of popular leaders:

The late 19th and early 20th centuries in British India were marked by increasing political consciousness and demands for self-determination. The Indian National Congress, founded in 1885, was at the forefront of the political movement advocating for greater representation and rights for Indians within a united India.

As time progressed, differences between Hindus and Muslims started to become apparent, and concerns arose about the political future of Muslims within a united India. The question of separate electorates for Muslims, introduced by the Morley-Minto Reforms of 1909, highlighted the communal divide.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE TWO NATION THEORY:

SIR SYED AHMAD KHAN

While Sir Syed initially advocated for cooperation between Muslims and the British, he also recognized the distinct identity of Muslims in India. He laid the groundwork for the Two Nation Theory by highlighting cultural and religious differences.

ALLAMA IQBAL

Iqbal argued that Muslims in India had a distinct socio-political identity and should have their own state to preserve their cultural and religious values. He envisioned this state as a means of safeguarding the rights and interests of the Muslim community.

MUHAMMAD ALI JINNAH

Jinnah argued that Hindus and Muslims were distinct nations with different customs, traditions, and religions. He advocated for the creation of a separate Muslim state, where Muslims could freely practice their religion and develop their socio-political institutions. The Two Nation Theory gained momentum and eventually led to the creation of Pakistan in 1947, as the Indian Independence Act provided for the partition of British India into two independent states, India and Pakistan, based on religious lines. Pakistan emerged as a separate nation where Muslims could live according to their distinct socio-cultural and religious values.

ESTABLISHMENT OF MUSLIM LEAGUE

INTRODUCTION

The establishment of the Muslim League was a pivotal development in the political landscape of British India, laying the foundation for the representation and protection of Muslim interests. This lesson delves into the aims, objectives, and the significant role played by the Muslim League in the struggle for India's independence.

AIMS AND OBJECTIVES OF ESTABLISHMENT OF MUSLIM LEAGUE:

The Muslim League was founded on December 30, 1906, in Dhaka, with the following key aims and objectives:

- The Muslim League aimed to provide a political platform for Muslims to voice their concerns and aspirations within the broader framework of British India's political structure.
- The league sought to safeguard the political, social, and economic rights of Muslims. It aimed to ensure that the interests of the Muslim community were adequately represented in legislative bodies.
- The Muslim League aimed to foster unity among Muslims and bridge the communal divide. It sought to create a sense of solidarity among Muslims, recognizing their distinct identity.

ESTABLISHMENT OF MUSLIM LEAGUE

The Muslim League played a crucial role in shaping the course of India's struggle for independence, contributing to the political discourse and negotiations. Key aspects of its role include:

I. PROTECTION OF RIGHTS

The Muslim League advocated for the protection of Muslim rights in the face of a growing Indian nationalist movement. It worked to ensure that Muslims had a voice in legislative and administrative matters, addressing concerns related to religious, cultural, and economic interests.

II. POLITICAL SETTLEMENT WITH CONGRESS

The Muslim League engaged in negotiations with the Indian National Congress to find a political settlement that would accommodate the interests of both Hindus and Muslims. Despite differences, the Lucknow Pact of 1916 marked a significant agreement between the two parties, envisioning joint efforts for self-governance.

III. NUMBER OF MUSLIMS

The Muslim League focused on increasing Muslim representation in legislative bodies. It aimed to secure a fair share of seats for Muslims, recognizing their numerical strength and the need for effective representation in the political arena.

IV. SEATS

The Muslim League's efforts were directed towards securing adequate representation for Muslims in legislative assemblies. This included negotiations with the British authorities to ensure that Muslims had a proportionate share of seats based on their population.

V. PROPORTIONATE REPRESENTATION

Recognizing the diverse religious and cultural landscape of India, the Muslim League sought proportionate representation for Muslims in legislative bodies. This was crucial for addressing the concerns of a minority community and ensuring their effective participation in the political process.

QUAID-I-AZAM'S FOURTEEN POINTSFEDERAL STRUCTURE

A federal system for India, with autonomous provinces having control over their affairs, and the central government dealing with defense, foreign affairs, and communications.

PROVINCIAL AUTONOMY

Provincial autonomy to safeguard the interests and rights of the Muslim-majority provinces, ensuring the protection of cultural, educational, and economic rights.

REPRESENTATION IN LEGISLATURES

Adequate and effective representation for Muslims in all legislatures, both at the central and provincial levels, proportionate to their population.

SEPARATE ELECTORATES

Retention of separate electorates for Muslims to ensure they can elect their representatives independently and protect their political interests.

MUSLIM MAJORITY PROVINCES

Redrawing of provincial boundaries to create contiguous areas with a Muslim majority, particularly in Punjab and Bengal.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Full religious freedom for all communities, ensuring the protection of their places of worship, religious practices, and cultural traditions.

SAFEGUARDS FOR MINORITIES

Constitutional guarantees and safeguards for the rights and interests of religious and linguistic minorities in various regions.

MUSLIMS IN GOVERNMENT SERVICES

Adequate representation of Muslims in government services, ensuring their fair participation in administrative roles.

SEPARATION OF SINDH

The separation of Sindh from Bombay Presidency to address the concerns of the Muslim majority population.

REFORMS IN NWFP

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province (NWFP) to ensure the equitable representation of Muslims in the region.

BALUCHISTAN AUTONOMY

Granting autonomy to Balochistan and ensuring the protection of the rights and interests of its diverse population.

MUSLIMS IN MILITARY

Adequate representation of Muslims in the armed forces to ensure their participation in the defense of the country.

URDU AS NATIONAL LANGUAGE

Recognition of Urdu as the lingua franca of the region and its inclusion as one of the official languages, along with other regional languages.

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORMS

Constitutional reforms to be based on the principles of democracy and the protection of minority rights, with the consent of all communities.

Quaid-i-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah presented these Fourteen Points in 1929 as a comprehensive plan to safeguard the political and socio-economic rights of Muslims in British India. These points became a crucial framework for future negotiations and discussions leading up to the creation of Pakistan in 1947.

IQBAL'S ALLAHABAD ADDRESS, 1930

Allama Iqbal's Allahabad Address in 1930 laid the groundwork for the creation of Pakistan. In his address, he envisioned:

I.SEPARATE MUSLIM STATE

Iqbal passionately advocated for a separate Muslim state to protect the distinct identity and rights of Muslims in the Indian subcontinent.

II.DISTINCT MUSLIM NATION

He emphasized that Muslims constituted a unique nation with its own cultural, social, and political values.

III.AUTONOMY FOR MUSLIM PROVINCES

Iqbal proposed the creation of autonomous Muslim provinces within the Indian federation, ensuring self-governance for Muslims.

IV.POLITICAL UNITY

Urging Muslim unity, Iqbal called for a collective effort to overcome internal differences and work towards shared political goals.

"I would like to see the Punjab, North-West Frontier Province, Sind, and Baluchistan amalgamated into a single state. Self-government within the British Empire, or without the British Empire, the formation of a consolidated Northwest Indian Muslim state appears to be the final destiny of the Muslims, at least of Northwest India."

These lines succinctly capture Iqbal's vision of a consolidated Muslim state in Northwest India, laying the foundation for the creation of Pakistan.

ACT OF 1935 AND THE PROVINCIAL AUTONOMY

The Government of India Act of 1935 marked a pivotal moment in British India's constitutional history. Notable for its introduction of provincial autonomy, the Act devolved significant legislative and executive powers to the provinces, fostering a more decentralized governance structure. This shift allowed elected ministers in the provinces greater authority, reducing the Governor's role to a ceremonial one. The Act retained the system of separate electorates for Muslims and granted Muslim-majority provinces, such as Punjab and Bengal, the ability to shape policies reflecting their distinct socio-political landscape. While the move towards provincial autonomy was a significant step, the struggle for independence persisted, and the Act of 1935 became a precursor to further constitutional developments in the lead-up to the creation of Pakistan in 1947.

PAKISTAN MOVEMENT

• LAHORE RESOLUTION 1940

The Lahore Resolution, also known as the Pakistan Resolution, was passed on March 23, 1940, during the All-India Muslim League's annual session in Lahore. Proposed by A.K. Fazlul Huq, the resolution called for the creation of independent states for Muslims in regions where they were a numerical majority, emphasizing the distinct political and cultural identity of Muslims in British India.

JOBAL'S ALLAHABAD ADDRESS, 1930

Amidst growing demands for constitutional reforms, various proposals were put forth to address the concerns of different communities in British India. The Cripps Mission of 1942 and the Wavell Plan of 1945 were attempts to find a constitutional arrangement acceptable to all, but they did not lead to a consensus.

• SIMLA CONFERENCE

The Simla Conference of 1945 aimed at resolving differences between the Indian National Congress and the Muslim League. However, the conference failed due to irreconcilable disagreements, primarily regarding the composition of the future government.

• ELECTION OF 1945-46

The general elections of 1945-46 were a crucial turning point. The Muslim League, led by Muhammad Ali Jinnah, won a significant mandate in Muslim-majority areas, strengthening their demand for a separate nation.

• 3RD JUNE PLAN AND LORD MOUNTBATTEN

Lord Mountbatten's arrival as the last Viceroy of India marked a critical phase. The 3rd June Plan, also known as the Mountbatten Plan, proposed the partition of British India into two independent dominions, India and Pakistan, based on religious lines.

• 3RD JUNE PLAN AND THE CREATION OF PAKISTAN

On June 3, 1947, the Indian Independence Act was passed, endorsing the 3rd June Plan. This paved the way for the creation of Pakistan, which officially came into existence on August 14, 1947.

• THE INDIAN INDEPENDENCE BILL, 1947

The Indian Independence Bill, introduced in the British Parliament, provided the legal framework for the transfer of power and the creation of two independent states. It received royal assent on July 18, 1947.

• RADCLIFF AWARD

Following the demarcation of boundaries, Sir Cyril Radcliffe, the appointed boundary commissioner, announced the Radcliffe Award on August 17, 1947. The award delineated the borders between India and Pakistan, leading to the partition of Punjab and Bengal.

The Pakistan Movement culminated in the establishment of Pakistan as an independent nation, fulfilling the aspirations of millions who sought a homeland where they could freely practice their religion and shape their destiny.

ROLE OF VARIOUS PROVINCES IN THE PAKISTAN MOVEMENT• PUNJAB

Punjab played a crucial role in the Pakistan Movement due to its diverse religious and cultural composition. While the province was home to a significant Sikh and Hindu population, Muslims formed a majority. Leaders like Sir Sikandar Hayat Khan and later Khizr Hayat Khan played pivotal roles in supporting the Muslim League's demand for a separate state. The Lahore Resolution of 1940, which laid the foundation for Pakistan, was passed in Punjab's capital. Despite communal tensions, the Muslims of Punjab overwhelmingly supported the creation of Pakistan, and the province became an integral part of the new nation in 1947.

• SINDH

Sindh, with a predominantly Muslim population, played a supportive role in the Pakistan Movement. Leaders like Sir Abdullah Haroon and Ghulam Hussain Hidayatullah were instrumental in advocating for the rights of Muslims and supporting the demand for a separate state. Sindh's commitment to the cause was evident in the 1945-46 elections, where the Muslim League secured a significant mandate. Sindh became an integral part of Pakistan, contributing to the diversity and unity of the newly formed nation.

• BALUCHISTAN

Balochistan, with its distinct tribal structure, witnessed active participation in the Pakistan Movement. Tribal leaders and intellectuals, such as the Khan of Kalat and Mir Ghaus Bakhsh Bizenjo, played key roles in supporting the idea of an independent Muslim state. The people of Balochistan, despite facing geographical and communication challenges, expressed their solidarity with the Pakistan Movement. Balochistan's integration into Pakistan post-partition contributed to the geographical diversity of the newly formed country.

• KHYBER PAKHTUNKHWA

Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, historically known as the Northwest Frontier Province (NWFP), had a diverse population with Pashtuns being the majority. Leaders like Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, known as the "Frontier Gandhi," initially had reservations about the demand for Pakistan. However, as the Pakistan Movement gained momentum, a significant section of the population in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa started supporting the cause. The 1945-46 elections reflected this shift, with the Muslim League gaining substantial support. Khyber Pakhtunkhwa became an essential part of Pakistan, contributing to the unity and diversity of the new nation.

IMPORTANCE OF 14 AUGUST, 1947 A.D.

The 14th of August 1947 stands as a pivotal moment in history, marking the birth of Pakistan and the end of British colonial rule in the Indian subcontinent. This day holds profound significance, symbolizing the realization of the Pakistan Movement's aspirations and the creation of a sovereign nation for Muslims. Beyond its historical importance, the 14th of August has become an annual occasion of national celebration, fostering unity in diversity and commemorating the sacrifices made during the struggle for independence. It serves as a reminder of Pakistan's cultural identity and a testament to the resilience and determination of its people. The day is marked by patriotic fervor, flag hoisting ceremonies, and a collective reflection on the principles of justice, equality, and self-determination that define the nation.

RESPONSIBILITY OF CITIZENS OF AN IDEOLOGICAL STATE

- Citizens have the responsibility to understand, appreciate, and uphold the ideological principles upon which the state is founded. This involves embracing values such as justice, equality, and respect for diversity.

- Citizens should actively participate in the civic life of the nation, including voting in elections, engaging in community service, and contributing to the well-being of society.

- Fostering a culture of tolerance and social harmony is a crucial responsibility. Citizens should respect and appreciate the diversity within the society, regardless of differences in ethnicity, religion, or socio-economic status.

- It is the responsibility of citizens to pursue education and stay informed about the issues affecting the nation. Informed citizens are better equipped to contribute positively to the development and progress of the country.

- Citizens have a duty to abide by the laws of the state. Respecting legal frameworks ensures the maintenance of social order and contributes to a just and stable society.

- Taking care of the environment is a shared responsibility. Citizens should engage in practices that promote sustainability, conservation, and the responsible use of natural resources.

- Contributing to the economic well-being of the state is essential. This involves paying taxes honestly, supporting local businesses, and participating in economic activities that contribute to the country's prosperity.

- Citizens should take an active interest in the security and defense of the nation. This may include supporting the armed forces, promoting national security measures, and being vigilant against potential threats.

- Taking care of the less fortunate and marginalized members of society is a responsibility. Engaging in philanthropy, volunteering, and supporting social welfare initiatives contribute to a more compassionate and just society.

- Citizens should exercise critical thinking and engage in constructive criticism when needed. Holding the government accountable through lawful and thoughtful critique contributes to the overall improvement of governance and policies.

In an ideological state, citizens play a crucial role in embodying and perpetuating the values that define the nation. These responsibilities collectively contribute to the development, progress, and well-being of the society they inhabit.

QUAID-I-AZAM'S ROLE AS FIRST GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF PAKISTAN

INTRODUCTION

Quaid-i-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah, the founding father of Pakistan, was a statesman of unparalleled vision, resilience, and charisma. His unwavering commitment to the creation of Pakistan and his pivotal role as its first Governor-General set the tone for the nascent nation. Jinnah's leadership was characterized by his astute political acumen, unwavering dedication to principles, and a deep understanding of the challenges facing the newly formed state. His personality, marked by an aura of gravitas and an indomitable spirit, inspired a sense of unity and purpose among the people of Pakistan.

QUAID-E-AZAM'S ROLE AS GOVERNOR-GENERAL

• NATIONAL INTEGRITY

Jinnah prioritized national unity and worked tirelessly to foster a sense of belonging among Pakistan's diverse communities. His efforts laid the foundation for a cohesive and united nation.

• NATIONAL INTEGRITY

In the aftermath of partition, Jinnah played a pivotal role in addressing the challenges posed by the mass migration and resettlement of refugees. His focus on humanitarian concerns demonstrated his commitment to the welfare of all citizens.

• SETTLEMENT OF REFUGEES

Jinnah emphasized the importance of meritocracy and professionalism among government officers, ushering in a change in the bureaucratic culture. His leadership aimed at creating a just and efficient administration.

• CHANGE IN THE ATTITUDE OF GOVERNMENT OFFICERS

Jinnah staunchly opposed any form of discrimination based on ethnicity or race. His commitment to equality laid the groundwork for a society that embraced diversity and rejected divisive practices.

• NEGATION TO PROVINCIAL AND RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

Recognizing the economic challenges facing Pakistan, Jinnah worked towards establishing the guiding principles of the nation's economy, emphasizing self-reliance, industrialization, and equitable distribution of resources.

• DETERMINATION OF GUIDING PRINCIPLES OF PAKISTAN'S ECONOMY

Jinnah's astute diplomacy set the tone for Pakistan's foreign policy. He focused on securing recognition for the new state on the international stage and establishing diplomatic relations with key nations.

• ADVICE TO THE STUDENTS

Jinnah, foreseeing the role of education in shaping the future of the nation, provided valuable advice to students. He emphasized the importance of acquiring knowledge and developing a strong work ethic.

• DEDICATION

Jinnah's unparalleled dedication to the cause of Pakistan and his tireless efforts to shape the destiny of the nation earned him the title of "Quaid-i-Azam" (Great Leader). His personal sacrifices and steadfast leadership continue to inspire generations.

Quaid-i-Azam's role as the first Governor-General was marked by a deep sense of responsibility, foresight, and an unwavering commitment to the principles upon which Pakistan was founded. His legacy as a visionary leader continues to guide the nation to this day.
